

In Eden's Embrace: The Chronicles of Adam and Eve

Douglas C. Youvan

doug@youvan.com

January 29, 2024

"In 'In Eden's Embrace: The Chronicles of Adam and Eve,' we embark on a poetic and introspective journey through the legendary Garden of Eden, following the first moments of humanity's ancestors, Adam and Eve. This narrative reimagines the dawn of human consciousness, love, and understanding in a world unblemished by time and untouched by strife. Through a series of evocative scenes, the story captures the awe and wonder of the first humans as they discover the beauty and complexity of their world, the depth of their emotions, and the responsibilities entrusted to them. Each act, carefully crafted with language reminiscent of Old English and inspired by the poetic eloquence of Shakespeare's 'Romeo and Juliet,' delves into different aspects of their existence. From the initial awakening in Eden to the realization of their profound bond and the intricate balance of nature, this chronicle invites readers to experience a timeless narrative of love, discovery, and the eternal quest for purpose and meaning."

Act I: Awakening in Eden

Scene 1 - First Glimpse

[The scene opens to a lush, vibrant Garden of Eden. Birds chirp melodiously, and a gentle breeze rustles through the trees. The sun casts a warm, golden light over the landscape. In the midst of this paradise, ADAM and EVE slowly awaken. Their eyes meet for the first time, filled with wonder and amazement.]

ADAM: (gazing upon Eve with awe) What vision dost mine eyes behold? A creature so fair and wondrous, as if shaped from the very essence of nature's beauty.

EVE: (returning Adam's gaze with equal wonder) And thou, a form so noble and strong, standing as the very embodiment of creation's grace. Whence comest we in this verdant realm?

ADAM: (looking around) Verily, this garden, in its resplendent glory, seemeth like a dream. Yet, the warmth of the sun upon my skin doth speak of a truth most tangible.

EVE: (touching a flower) Yea, every petal, every leaf doth flutter like the gentlest harp strings under Heaven's breath. What art thou, fair blossom?

ADAM: (smiling) A flower, I believe, a token of this garden's endless marvels. Look how the light doth play upon its hue, a dance of colors to delight our very souls.

EVE: (with curiosity) And what be we, in this wondrous place? Art thou as new to this world as I?

ADAM: (nodding) Aye, like thee, I awoke but moments past, with no memory save the joy of this first meeting. Together, we must explore this Eden and all its mysteries.

EVE: (taking Adam's hand) Then let us walk together, and discover what wonders await. For in thy company, I find a comfort most profound.

ADAM: (gently leading Eve) Come, let us venture forth. The garden beckons with its siren's call, promising delights beyond our wildest fancies.

[They start to explore the garden, their steps tentative yet eager, as they begin to discover the world around them. The scene fades with Adam and Eve walking hand in hand, embarking on their journey of discovery.]

[End Scene]

Act I: Awakening in Eden

Scene 2 - The Garden's Splendor

[The scene unfolds with ADAM and EVE wandering through the lush expanse of the Garden of Eden. The garden is alive with vibrant colors and the air is perfumed with the scent of a thousand flowers. They are visibly enchanted by the beauty surrounding them, touching leaves and smelling flowers, their faces reflecting pure joy and wonder.]

EVE: (inhaling the scent of a rose) Lo, what fragrance fills the air, as sweet as the music of the spheres! See, Adam, how each petal unfolds like the morning's embrace.

ADAM: (examining a leaf) Aye, Eve, and mark how the leaves doth catch the sunlight, turning each drop of dew into a jewel more precious than any earthly treasure.

[They come across a bed of lilies near a stream, the water crystal clear and gleaming under the sun.]

EVE: (reaching towards the lilies) Behold these star-like blooms, cradled by yon gentle stream. As if each were a light, guiding our path through this Eden.

ADAM: (picking a lily and offering it to Eve) A gift, my lady, for thou art as fair and pure as these flowers. In their simplicity, a reflection of our own beginning.

EVE: (accepting the lily with a smile) And thou, as steadfast and sure as the earth upon which we tread. In this garden, we find the mirror of our souls.

[They continue to wander, coming across a fruit-bearing tree.]

ADAM: (pointing to the fruits) What bounty! The garden doth provide sustenance as well as beauty. Let us taste and see the flavors this Eden offers.

EVE: (taking a fruit and biting into it) A sweetness that sings upon the tongue, a melody of nature's own making. How can it be that we are so blessed, to partake in such abundance?

ADAM: (also tasting a fruit) Verily, we are graced with a paradise, a haven wrought by a power greater than ourselves. In each fruit, each leaf, a testament to life's endless wonder.

EVE: (looking around) In this place, I feel a peace most profound, as if my very soul hath found its home.

ADAM: (taking Eve's hand) And I, a companion most true. Together, let us be guardians of this Eden, stewards of its splendor.

[They walk off together, still marveling at the beauty of the garden, their hearts filled with gratitude and love for their newfound home.]

[End Scene]

Act II: The Celestial Dance

Scene 1 - The Sun's Embrace

[The scene opens before dawn in the Garden of Eden. ADAM and EVE are seated on a grassy knoll, gazing towards the eastern horizon where the first hints of light begin to paint the sky. The air is filled with the tranquil sounds of the awakening garden.]

ADAM: (in quiet anticipation) Behold, Eve, the sky doth change its cloak, from the dark of night to the bright hues of morn. A spectacle that promises a new beginning.

EVE: (watching in awe) As if the very heavens are painted afresh by an unseen hand. What magic stirs these colors to life?

[The sun begins to rise, casting a warm golden light over the garden. Adam and Eve's faces are illuminated by the sunrise, reflecting their wonder.]

ADAM: (gazing at the sun) See how the sun, in its royal ascent, banishes the shadows of night. Its rays, like golden threads, weaving warmth into the fabric of the day.

EVE: (embracing the warmth) And feel its embrace, gentle yet powerful. Like a loving heart, it spreads its warmth, touching all that lies beneath.

ADAM: (turning to Eve) Aye, and in its glow, I see the light of thine own eyes. For in thy gaze, I find a warmth that rivals the sun's own.

EVE: (blushing slightly) And in thy presence, Adam, I feel a light that no darkness can quench. Our love, much like this dawn, a beacon that grows ever brighter.

[They stand together, watching as the sun rises fully, its light now bathing the entire garden.]

ADAM: (reflecting) Just as the sun brings life to the day, so does our love bring life to my soul. A bond that strengthens with each passing moment.

EVE: (leaning against Adam) And as the sun follows its course, unwavering, so shall our love be constant, a perpetual light in our hearts.

[They embrace, looking out over the garden now fully alive in the sunlight, the flowers opening to the day.]

EVE: (contentedly) Each day, a new discovery, a new joy to share. In this garden, under the sun's embrace, we shall grow, together in love and light.

ADAM: (smiling) Together, forevermore, in Eden's embrace, under the watchful eye of the sun, our journey continues.

[The scene closes with Adam and Eve hand in hand, their faces turned towards the sun, symbolizing the dawn of their love and life together in Eden.]

[End Scene]

Act II: The Celestial Dance

Scene 2 - Moonlit Wonders

[The scene opens to a tranquil night in the Garden of Eden. The moon casts a soft, silvery glow over the landscape, bathing everything in a serene light. ADAM and EVE are sitting on a grassy hill, gazing up at the star-filled sky. The night is quiet, save for the gentle rustling of leaves and the distant call of nocturnal creatures.]

EVE: (in a hushed tone) Behold, Adam, the night's tapestry, woven with silver threads by the moon's gentle hand. Each star, a spark of light in the vastness of the heavens.

ADAM: (looking at the stars) Aye, a sight most wondrous. Like jewels strewn across the firmament, each star a story yet untold, a mystery uncharted.

[They watch in silence for a moment, taking in the celestial spectacle.]

EVE: (pointing to the moon) See how the moon reigns over the night, a sovereign in her domain. Her light, a soothing balm to the darkness, guiding our gaze to the stars above.

ADAM: (reflecting) In her light, I find a calmness, a peace that settles deep within. As if she whispers tales of old, stories of the world before time.

EVE: (nestling closer to Adam) And under her watchful eye, we find ourselves here, two souls intertwined by fate's own hand. What dost thou suppose the stars hold for us, Adam?

ADAM: (embracing Eve) Perhaps they hold our hopes, our dreams, casting them back to us in their gentle twinkle. A reminder that we are but a part of this vast creation.

[They look up as a shooting star streaks across the sky.]

EVE: (excitedly) A falling star! Make a wish, Adam, for it is said that such stars grant the desires of the heart.

ADAM: (closing his eyes briefly) Then my wish is simple: that this moment, under the moon's embrace, with thee by my side, lasts an eternity.

EVE: (smiling warmly) And mine, that our journey through this life be as boundless as the night sky, filled with wonder and love, as endless as the stars.

[The scene draws to a close with Adam and Eve lying back on the grass, their hands clasped together, gazing up at the moon and stars. The night whispers around them, a serene cocoon in the vastness of Eden.]

[End Scene]

Act III: Flora and Fauna

Scene 1 - Whispering Leaves

[The scene opens to a lush, verdant part of the Garden of Eden. The air is filled with the sweet scent of blossoms and the gentle rustling of leaves. ADAM and EVE are meandering through the garden, their attention drawn to the various trees and plants around them, touching leaves, smelling flowers, and occasionally tasting fruits.]

EVE: (examining a leaf) Adam, look upon these leaves, how they dance to the tune of the wind. Each one, a small wonder in itself, a piece of nature's grand puzzle.

ADAM: (picking a fruit) And these fruits, gifts from the trees, each a bounty of flavors and sustenance. A marvel how the earth provides for us so generously.

[They come across a tree laden with ripe apples.]

EVE: (reaching for an apple) Behold this fruit, as red as the dawn sky. How inviting it looks, how rich it must taste.

ADAM: (also taking an apple) Aye, let us taste and see. For in each fruit, a new discovery awaits, a new delight for our senses.

[They bite into the apples, their expressions reflecting the enjoyment of the taste.]

EVE: (joyfully) Oh, how sweet, how refreshing! Each bite, a burst of flavors, as if the sun itself were captured within.

ADAM: (nodding in agreement) Verily, it is as though the essence of life is contained in this simple fruit. A reminder of the abundance of this garden, of the providence that surrounds us.

[They continue their walk, coming across a bush of berries.]

EVE: (tasting a berry) And these berries, small yet bursting with juice. A different taste, yet equally wondrous.

ADAM: (observing the plants) Each plant, each tree, speaks in its own way. Whispering secrets of growth and life, of the cycles of nature.

[They pause, listening to the sound of the leaves in the breeze.]

EVE: (reflectively) In these whispers, I hear a melody, a song of the earth and sky. A harmony that binds all of creation.

ADAM: (gazing at the surrounding flora) In this chorus, we find our place. As caretakers of this garden, nurturers of its life. Our hands to tend, our hearts to cherish.

[The scene closes with Adam and Eve, each holding a piece of fruit, standing amidst the trees and plants. They look around with a sense of responsibility and awe, embracing their role as stewards of this bountiful garden.]

[End Scene]

Act III: Flora and Fauna

Scene 2 - Creatures Great and Small

[The scene opens in a different part of the Garden of Eden, where ADAM and EVE enter a clearing teeming with wildlife. Various animals are seen in their natural habitat – birds chirping in the trees, rabbits hopping in the grass, and deer grazing peacefully. The air is alive with the sounds of nature.]

EVE: (in wonder) Behold, Adam, the creatures of this garden, each so distinct, so full of life. How diverse are the forms of life that roam these lands!

ADAM: (watching a bird take flight) Aye, from the smallest ant to the loftiest eagle, each has its part in the grand tapestry of creation. How wondrously are they made, how perfectly adapted to their world.

[They walk further, observing the animals. A butterfly lands on Eve's hand.]

EVE: (delighted) Look, a creature as delicate as the morning dew, yet it dances through the air with such grace. A small marvel, yet no less significant.

ADAM: (pointing towards a lion in the distance) And yonder, the lion, majestic and strong. Even in its might, there lies a beauty, a nobility that commands respect.

[They watch as a group of animals gather around a watering hole, living in harmony.]

EVE: (reflectively) See how they gather, creatures great and small, each sharing in nature's bounty. In this garden, there is no strife, only the peace of coexistence.

ADAM: (joining in her reflection) It is a lesson for us, Eve. In harmony, they thrive, each dependent on the other, bound by the threads of life itself.

[Adam and Eve sit down, continuing to observe the animals.]

EVE: (gazing at a pair of birds) Each animal, in its way, shows us the beauty of life's design. In their movements, their habits, a wisdom that we can learn from.

ADAM: (nodding) Indeed, in their simplicity, a complexity unrivaled. A balance of nature, where each has its place, its role in the circle of life.

[The scene closes with Adam and Eve sitting quietly, watching the animals. The tranquility of the scene reflects the harmony of nature and the profound connection between all living things.]

[End Scene]

Act IV: Discovery of Self

Scene 1 - Language and Expression

[The scene opens in a serene part of the Garden of Eden. ADAM and EVE are sitting under a large, leafy tree. They seem to be in deep conversation, gesturing to the various elements around them – the sky, trees, animals, and even to each other.]

ADAM: (thoughtfully) Eve, in this garden of wonders, we have beheld much. Yet, to name these marvels, to give voice to our thoughts, this too is a gift.

EVE: (looking around) Verily, Adam, for in naming, we shape our world. See yonder tree, tall and strong; let us call it an 'oak', a symbol of strength and endurance.

ADAM: (nodding) And this delicate flower, with petals as soft as the morning light, let it be known as a 'rose', a beacon of beauty and grace.

[They continue this exercise, slowly and deliberately, finding names for the different things they encounter.]

EVE: (pointing to a bird) That creature, which sings so sweetly at dawn, let us call it a 'nightingale', a herald of the new day.

ADAM: (smiling) A fitting name indeed. And what of us, Eve? What name befits beings such as we, made in a likeness unlike any other?

EVE: (thinking) We are of the earth, yet more than the earth. Let us be 'humans', a name to signify our unique place in this creation.

[As they name things, their conversation gradually shifts to expressing their emotions and thoughts.]

ADAM: (expressively) In this act of naming, I find a joy profound, as if each word unlocks a new realm of understanding. In thee, Eve, I find a companion most true, a heart that understands my own.

EVE: (with warmth) And in thee, Adam, I discover a kindred spirit, one who shares in the wonder of this world. Together, we embark on life's greatest journey.

ADAM: (reaching for Eve's hand) Through language, we share our thoughts, our hopes, our fears. In words, we find a bridge between souls, a means to connect in ways unseen.

EVE: (clasping his hand) Aye, in our words, a bond unspoken yet deeply felt. A language of the heart, as essential as the air we breathe.

[The scene closes with Adam and Eve, still seated under the tree, engaged in deep conversation. Their faces are alight with the joy of discovery – not just of language, but of each other and the deep connection they share.]

[End Scene]

Act IV: Discovery of Self

Scene 2 - Reflections of the Soul

[The scene opens in a tranquil part of the Garden of Eden, near a calm, reflective pool. ADAM and EVE are seated beside the water, gazing at their reflections. The atmosphere is one of introspection and quiet contemplation.]

EVE: (looking at her reflection) Adam, in this pool, I see my form mirrored, yet it reveals naught of what lies within. What thoughts stir in thy heart, in this world so new and vast?

ADAM: (reflecting) Eve, within me, there lies a world of emotions. Wonder at our surroundings, joy in our companionship, and a curiosity unending. Yet, amidst this, a question lingers – what purpose are we to serve in this Eden?

EVE: (nodding thoughtfully) A question that echoes in my own soul. In our hearts, a longing for understanding, for a path to follow. We are creatures of thought and feeling, ever seeking, ever learning.

[They turn to face each other, their expressions earnest.]

ADAM: (reaching out) In thee, Eve, I find a mirror to my soul. Thy courage, thy kindness, they shine a light on parts of me I knew not existed.

EVE: (smiling softly) And in thee, Adam, I see a strength, a wisdom that guides me. Thou art my anchor in this vast sea of discovery.

[They pause, reflecting on their shared experiences.]

ADAM: (contemplatively) Each day with thee is a journey, a step towards understanding. In our words, our deeds, we unravel the mysteries of our being.

EVE: (agreeing) Together, we explore not just this garden, but the depths of our own selves. In each other, we find the answers to questions unasked.

[They stand and walk along the edge of the pool, their reflections following them.]

ADAM: (with resolve) Let us then journey forth, hand in hand. In unity, we shall find our purpose, our place in this Eden.

EVE: (with determination) Aye, for in our union lies our strength. As we learn about the world, so shall we learn about ourselves – reflections of the soul, intertwined.

[The scene closes with Adam and Eve walking away from the pool, their figures gradually blending with the lush greenery of the garden. Their journey of self-discovery, just like the garden around them, is rich with potential and brimming with life.]

[End Scene]

Act V: The Bond of Unity

Scene 1 - Complementary Union

[The scene opens in a secluded grove within the Garden of Eden. The atmosphere is serene and intimate. ADAM and EVE are walking side by side, their hands occasionally brushing against each other. The air is filled with a sense of realization and mutual understanding.]

ADAM: (reflectively) Eve, in our time together, I have come to see that in our differences lies a profound strength. Like two halves of a whole, we complete each other.

EVE: (nodding in agreement) Indeed, Adam. In thy strength, I find protection; in my gentleness, thou findest solace. Together, we form a union, balanced and harmonious.

[They stop and face each other, their expressions filled with affection and respect.]

ADAM: (gently) In thee, I find not just a companion, but a counterpart. Our bodies, our minds, our spirits – in every way, we are meant to be together.

EVE: (with warmth) And in thee, I find a partner, in every sense of the word. Our union, a testament to the balance of nature, a dance of two souls in perfect harmony.

[Adam takes Eve's hands in his, their eyes locked in a moment of deep connection.]

ADAM: (passionately) This bond we share, it goes beyond mere companionship. It is a bond of love, a sacred connection that transcends all else.

EVE: (heartfelt) A love that is as natural as the flow of the river, as steadfast as the mountains. In our unity, a love that is both a refuge and a beacon.

[They sit down together, leaning against a tree, still holding hands.]

ADAM: (contemplatively) In this garden, we have discovered much – the beauty of nature, the joy of discovery. But in this bond, we find the greatest treasure of all.

EVE: (looking into Adam's eyes) A treasure that we shall cherish and nurture. For in our love lies not just our joy, but the foundation of all that is to come.

[Adam and Eve, now sitting close together, look out at the garden around them, their faces alight with the joy and certainty of their love.]

ADAM: (softly) Together, we shall journey through this life, side by side, heart to heart. In unity, we shall face whatever this world may bring.

EVE: (resting her head on Adam's shoulder) And in that unity, a strength unbreakable. Our love, a guiding star in the journey of life.

[The scene closes with the couple sitting in peaceful silence, the tranquility of the grove echoing the deep, unspoken bond they share.]

[End Scene]

Act V: The Bond of Unity

Scene 2 - The Dance of Life

[The scene opens in a verdant meadow in the Garden of Eden. Flowers bloom in abundance, and the air is filled with the sweet scent of nature. ADAM and EVE are walking hand in hand, their expressions contemplative yet filled with a sense of purpose.]

EVE: (gazing at the surrounding life) Adam, as we behold this garden, teeming with life in all its forms, a realization dawns upon me. In us lies the power to give life, to continue this wondrous cycle.

ADAM: (nodding thoughtfully) Indeed, Eve. In our union, a potential most profound – to create life, to be stewards not just of this garden, but of a lineage, a future.

[They stop and sit beside a gently flowing stream, watching the water as it winds its way through the meadow.]

EVE: (with a sense of wonder) To think, from our love could spring forth new life, beings born of our essence. What joy, what responsibility, lies within this gift.

ADAM: (looking into the distance) Our descendants, stretching forth into time, each a part of us, yet each their own. Through them, our love, our essence, shall endure.

[They turn to face each other, their eyes reflecting the magnitude of their realization.]

EVE: (earnestly) In this dance of life, we are but the first steps. Our love, the foundation upon which generations shall build, each adding their own chapter to the story of existence.

ADAM: (with resolve) Then let us embrace this role, with love and with reverence. In our children, and their children, the legacy of this Eden shall live on.

[They stand, joining hands, looking out at the horizon.]

ADAM: (with determination) Together, we shall guide them, teach them the ways of this world. In them, the best of us shall flourish – our love, our wisdom, our hope.

EVE: (smiling softly) And through them, we shall see the unfolding of life's grand tapestry, each thread woven with care, each pattern a part of the greater whole.

[The scene closes with Adam and Eve, standing side by side, looking out over the meadow. Their faces are filled with a sense of purpose and anticipation for the future. The garden around them thrives, a symbol of the life and love they are destined to nurture and pass on.]

[End Scene]

ChatGPT

Act VI: The Complexity of Nature

Scene 1 - Intricacies Unveiled

[The scene opens in a dense part of the Garden of Eden, rich with diverse flora and fauna. The sun filters through the canopy, casting dappled light on the forest floor. ADAM and EVE are walking slowly, observing the interactions between different elements of the ecosystem.]

ADAM: (pointing to a bee pollinating a flower) Eve, mark how this small creature, the bee, doth play a role so vital. From flower to flower it travels, a carrier of life's essence.

EVE: (watching the bee) Aye, Adam. In its quest for sustenance, it aids the bloom in its own quest to bear fruit. Such a delicate balance, where each relies on the other.

[They move on, coming across a stream teeming with fish, bordered by lush vegetation.]

ADAM: (observing the stream) And look upon this stream, how it nourishes the land. The fish that swim within, the plants that border its banks – each a piece of a greater puzzle.

EVE: (crouching by the water) In this water, life finds its rhythm. The ebb and flow, a dance of creation and sustenance. Every drop a testament to nature's interwoven tapestry.

[They continue their exploration, coming across a bird's nest with chicks in a tree.]

EVE: (gazing at the nest) Behold, the bird tends to its young with care, each chirp a call of life's persistence. In this nest, a cycle of nurturing and growth.

ADAM: (looking up at the nest) It is a cycle mirrored throughout this garden. In each creature, a role to fulfill, a part in the endless cycle of life and renewal.

[They sit down under a large tree, surrounded by the sounds and sights of the vibrant ecosystem.]

ADAM: (deep in thought) This garden, it is more than a collection of plants and creatures. It is a symphony, each element a note, essential to the harmony of the whole.

EVE: (joining in reflection) A symphony we are part of, not apart from. Our actions, our choices, they ripple through this delicate balance, affecting all within this web of life.

[They look around, taking in the complexity and beauty of the world around them.]

EVE: (with a sense of responsibility) In this understanding, a duty unfolds. We must tread with care, with respect for the intricacies of this world.

ADAM: (with determination) Aye, for in our hands lies the power to preserve or to disrupt. Let us choose the former, to be guardians of this garden, keepers of the balance.

[The scene closes with Adam and Eve standing, their resolve clear in their eyes. They look out at the garden, a world of complexity and wonder, ready to take on their role as stewards of nature's intricate masterpiece.]

[End Scene]

Act VI: The Complexity of Nature

Scene 2 - Pondering Purpose

[The scene opens in a tranquil part of the Garden of Eden, near a gently flowing river. The sun is setting, casting a warm, golden light over the landscape. ADAM and EVE are sitting on the riverbank, their expressions thoughtful and introspective.]

EVE: (looking at the setting sun) Adam, in this vast garden, amidst its wonders and mysteries, a question weighs upon my heart. For what purpose were we placed in this paradise?

ADAM: (gazing at the river) A question that echoes in my own soul, Eve. Are we merely to dwell in this beauty, or is there a greater role we are meant to fulfill?

[They watch in silence as the water flows by, the sound of the river adding to the contemplative atmosphere.]

EVE: (turning to Adam) In our care for the garden, our stewardship of its creatures, I sense a purpose. To guard and cherish this creation, a task most noble and profound.

ADAM: (nodding in agreement) Indeed, to be stewards, caretakers of this divine gift. It is a role that speaks of responsibility, a trust placed upon us by a power far greater.

[They stand and walk along the riverbank, their steps slow and measured.]

ADAM: (looking up at the sky) And what of our Creator, the one who fashioned this garden, who breathed life into our very beings? In our stewardship, we honor that sacred trust.

EVE: (reflectively) In each plant, each creature, I see the hand of the Creator, a reflection of a love and wisdom beyond our understanding. In our care for these, we grow closer to that divine presence.

[They pause, watching the last rays of the sun disappear below the horizon.]

ADAM: (with a sense of awe) Our purpose, then, is intertwined with this garden, with the Creator. In our every action, a chance to honor that which has been bestowed upon us.

EVE: (taking Adam's hand) Together, in unity and love, we shall fulfill this purpose. Our journey, a testament to the trust placed in us, a journey not just through this garden, but towards a higher calling.

[The scene closes with Adam and Eve, hand in hand, looking out over the garden as the first stars appear in the evening sky. Their faces are serene, yet filled with the resolve to embrace their role as stewards of Eden and seekers of a deeper connection with the Creator.]

[End Scene]